

Dagnija Briede
Riga Stradins University, Latvia

Profile: SW bachelor, mg.paed., social work education programme administrator

Title: The Personal and Professional Qualities of the Social Worker in an Interprofessional team

Social workers profession is aimed at interprofessional cooperation and teamwork, but it is not always easily achievable. It is important to understand that the cooperative abilities of the social worker serves an example and help the client to develop his/her own relationships, since interaction skills and abilities are the basis in the development of any successful relationships. The lecture focuses on qualities for successful cooperation. The audience is invited to evaluate their own interpersonal qualities as individuals and as professionals, which is a way to develop the desired qualities. The interactive tasks presented give an opportunity for the participants to experience group synergy that results from successful team interaction.